FOREWORD

SEFF has operated a service within the East Region of Northern Ireland for circa 3 years now, the service was developed for two core reasons;

1. A realisation that we were failing to provide a truly holistic set of services for our members located within this sub-Region of Northern Ireland, the vast majority of our efforts were concentrated within the West and South of the Country.
2. An acknowledgement that there are substantive numbers of victims/survivors living within the East Region who have never had access to victim/survivor support services, particularly outside of the greater Belfast area.

This particular memorial quilt aptly titled The SEFF Family Remembers seeks to bring a level of recognition to those who previously were not acknowledged, who haven't had political or resource-based focus.

This memorial quilt brings together families of innocents from across the community and who have been impacted by violence perpetrated across the board.

This is SEFF's 7th quilt and follows:

Your Legacy Lives On, A Patchwork of Innocents, Uniting Innocent Victims, Terrorism knows No Borders, Brougher Mountain Innocents Remembered and Through Remembering, We Build Bridges.

Each of these previous brand titles reflect core messages we wish to represent through the lives being remembered and also honoured.

The basis for the East Region Quilt name can be found in comments made by many families, no-one remembers us, no-one cares, we are forgotten. The SEFF Family ALWAYS remembers and will continue to do so in the months and years ahead, thus ensuring that the legacy of innocents and the way in which they chose to live their lives is represented and honoured.

I would wish to thank the following people who have assisted my efforts in making this Project possible:

1. Sonia Johnston (Project facilitator) and her small but very committed team of volunteer quilters. Yet again the team have done us proud and have produced an absolute work of art, a precious piece of living history and which will be mainly displayed within our East Region Office, Lisburn.

2. Joy Aiken (SEFF's Projects Coordinator) for her efforts in liaising with families and in collating information thus providing the essential link between quilting volunteers and the families.
3. Mabel Black and Avril Johnston for their important contributions.
4. Any other staff members who proactively engaged with families to secure their involvement with the Project.
5. Nevin Brown (Advocacy Support Worker) who took on responsibility for securing new quilt stands that are more user friendly for displaying the quilts as well as bringing a sense of uniformity.
6. The Victims and Survivors Service and the Peace IV Recording Lived Experiences Project which provided the necessary resourcing for the Project.

This memorial quilt covers members of the security forces (Police and Army) Prison Service personnel, civilians from across the community and of all ages, from 17-mths - 87 years and it also includes those impacted by all forms of terrorism and wider violence.

SEFF's Memorial Quilts have been displayed in many public venues over the years and this will increase in the times ahead with a number of locations booked to host them, the quilts humanise those murdered/killed and bring to life the special people being remembered.

They are also a powerful statement of the illegitimacy and wrong of violence and that there was NEVER justification for the use of criminal violence in the furtherance of or defence of a political objective - there was ALWAYS other options.

Yours,

Kenny Donaldson

JAMES (JIMMY) MCCURRIE

CIVILIAN

23RD MARCH 1925 – 27TH JUNE 1970

James (Jimmy) McCurrie was married to Kathleen and was a father to 5 children, Mary, Robert, Billy, Margaret and Jimmy (who was born exactly 6 months after his father's murder).

Since his discharge from the army in 1947, Jimmy worked at Kellys coal quay in Belfast.

Apart from his family Jimmy had a keen interest in boxing having boxed for his regiment whilst in the army.

He was a quiet family man and Jimmy, like most men at the time would have gone out on a Saturday afternoon to the local pub to meet up with friends and enjoy the 'crack' although during the summer months most Saturdays would be spent at the seaside in Bangor Co Down with his family.

That particular Saturday 27th June 1970 would have been a Bangor day but the younger McCurries were doing what was normal at the time and were engrossed with their friends painting the kerb stones for the upcoming 12th July Celebrations. That evening Jimmy went to the local Buffs club to pay his dues. Making his way home through Streets he had walked all his life when Provisional IRA terrorists opened fire, without warning and shot Jimmy and another innocent unarmed man, Bobby [Ginger] Neill. In a preplanned and unproved attack PIRA murdered Jimmy and Bobby and wounded more than 28 people.

The newspaper headlined read "People shot at like flies" and another headline stated "East Belfast's worst night Air raids".

The McCurrie/Neill Memorial Garden opened in June 2003 and also remembers four innocent men murdered in West Belfast on 27th June 1970 - William Thomas Reid, William Kincaid, Daniel Loughlins, Alexander Gould.

Innocent, Unarmed, Not Forgotten.

COLIN NICHOLL

CIVILIAN

30TH JUNE 1970 - 11TH DECEMBER 1971

Baby Colin aged just 17-months-old was one of four innocents to be murdered as a result of the Balmoral Furniture bomb attack.

Two-year-old Tracey Munn and 17-month-old Colin Nicholl were being pushed in their pram on the Shankill Road when a wall collapsed on top of them. Tracey's mother was seriously injured suffering a fractured skull and pelvis, she was looking after baby Colin while his mother was attending the funeral of her young nephew.

The funeral processions of the two babies met up at Cliftonpark Avenue with almost 1,000 men walking in the cortege. As the coffins passed, people in the streets cried openly.

Colin lived with his adoptive parents at Elimgrove Street. His parents were in England at the time of the bombing to visit his mother's sister whose young child was killed in a car accident.

Others who were murdered in this no warning bomb incident perpetrated by The Provisional IRA were:

Harold King, 20-year-old Roman Catholic civilian, single, and who was an auctioneer's assistant.

Tracey Munn, 2-year-old Protestant baby girl

Hugh Bruce, 50-year-old Protestant civilian, married with two children, and who was a commissionaire.

Nineteen other people were injured, some of them seriously.

SERGEANT MAYNARD CRAWFORD

SERVICE NUMBER: 21499058

17TH JULY 1930 – 13TH JANUARY 1972

Maynard was married with two sons who were aged 9 and 3 years at the time of his murder. Due to their age his sons have very few memories of their Daddy but they are very blessed to have heard many stories of their father from his closest friends. Many spoke about his professionalism as a soldier but also his values as a man.

A joiner by trade Maynard worked for various building contractors, he was a member of the 'B' specials and a marksman winning many trophies before its disbandment upon which he joined the Ulster Defence Regiment.

Maynard was a big man of 6'3" and worked hard to look after his wife and sons sadly they lost out on so much as he was taken from them at such a young age. He missed out on his children and grandchildren and his wife was left to bring up her two sons on her own, she was an incredibly strong woman and worked all her life to provide for her boys.

Maynard was always wanting to help people, he was a kind and gentle person who would be there if anyone needed a hand, his sons are now often told that they have the same traits.

On 13th January 1972 Maynard was working on a building site in Belfast when he was ambushed by the Provisional IRA. Maynard was the building site foreman, he was sitting in a van waiting to take workers home just after 4pm when four gunmen pulled alongside in a dark blue Ford Cortina and fired two shots through the window.

Maynard was hit in the head and died instantly. He is missed every day by his family.

CONSTABLE ERNEST MCALLISTER

SERVICE NUMBER: 8658

11TH SEPTEMBER 1940 – 20TH MARCH 1972

Ernest joined the RUC in 1961 and was first stationed in Omagh along with his best friend Stan Corry. Ernest and Stan remained firm friends during the next 10 years and indeed were “Best Man” for each other when they each got married. Stan was murdered on duty in Belfast in November 1971 and the two families remain in close contact to this day.

During his service Ernest was also stationed in Trillick, Strabane, Drumquin, Lisburn and Castlereagh. Whilst serving in Castlereagh, he worked in the Communications Unit for 2 years.

On 20th March 1972 he proudly put on his uniform for the first time since transferring to Castlereagh and volunteered to assist his colleagues in the City Centre. He was working alongside Constable Bernie O'Neill when they received a radio communication advising that a report of a car bomb had been received. They were tasked with evacuating Castle Street and were in the process of leading people to safety in Donegall Street when the car bomb exploded.

The Provisional IRA had in fact abandoned the car bomb in Donegall Street. Ernest and his colleague were murdered instantly along with 4 civilians, another man died from injuries a few days later bringing the death toll to 7. There were almost 150 injured, some losing limbs, and some losing their eyesight. The Provisional IRA admitted responsibility but no one has ever been convicted or charged for their part in these murders.

Ernest married Florence in March 1968 and together they had a daughter, Gillian who was born in August 1970. At that time the family were living in Lisburn. When Ernest was murdered, Florence was pregnant and Jacqui was born some 4½ months afterwards.

Ernest left behind his grieving father and two sisters he was a very sociable man and enjoyed a glass or two of Guinness! He enjoyed sailing on Belfast Lough, deep sea fishing and wildfowl shooting. He was also involved with the Masonic Lodge at The Mount in Belfast. He had many great friends and indeed even after all these years, his family are still hearing stories from people who knew him well and who enjoyed spending time in his company. As a father Ernest is always talked about at home and his family have a deep sense of pride in the service that he gave to his country.

Ernest now has 4 grandchildren who all know about their Granda and the sacrifice that he made. Indeed, his 2 grandsons have many of his traits. The family are determined that they will continue to ensure that his memory lives on, despite the passing of all these years.

CONSTABLE ROBERT DAVID LAVERTY

SERVICE NUMBER: 10887

8TH SEPTEMBER 1953 – 16TH JULY 1972

Robert David Laverty was the fourth child and second son of James and Jane Laverty and he came from the town of Ballycastle on the North Antrim Coast. Jane had been widowed in 1962 and with seven children she relied on her tenacious spirit, her hard work and creativity, and her faith to carry her through what had been ten tough years.

Robert joined the RUC as a career move after initially serving time as an apprentice engineer at Monsanto in Coleraine. He saw this move as an opportunity to provide a good life for himself and to send something home for the family in Ballycastle.

However in the very early hours of July 16th 1972 Robert was a back seat passenger in a patrol car which was ambushed on the lower Antrim Road in Belfast. Robert was shot in the head. Despite his colleagues best efforts to save his life, he passed away without regaining consciousness.

Robert was 18 years old and his sad passing had a devastating impact on his very close knit family and in the wider community in North Antrim where the Laverty family were well known, loved and respected.

Thousands turned out for his funeral in the local Presbyterian Church where the church bell was later restored in his honour by friends and colleagues. Robert is sadly missed but never forgotten by his family.

The words of the famous hymn, 'How Great Thou Art' were chosen for Robert's patch as this hymn has great significance to the family, it is often sung in remembrance of Robert when the family get together.

BLOODY FRIDAY

21ST JULY 1972

On 21st July 1972 The Provisional IRA set off 22 bombs across the City of Belfast terrorising the community, from whatever background people came.

The net result was significant destruction to the city, with a message being sent to potential foreign investors and others, to stay away from Belfast and Northern Ireland.

However, the greater and most significant loss that day was the loss of human life; 9 were murdered, with over 130 injured as a result of that day of carnage.

The purpose of The Provisional IRA's actions that day was to destabilise Northern Ireland and our capital city of Belfast, they sought to instil fear and breed division. The intention was to ward off would be investors in the City and Northern Ireland, they sought to bring the city to its' knees".

The Bloody Friday families have carried on with their lives and have never received focus nor resources lavished upon them, they have carried on with a quiet yet steely determination.

Bloody Friday was a brutal premeditated day of coordinated violence, no-one has been held accountable for it, we are clear that this is unacceptable, the families deserve accountability, their loved one's lives mattered.

SEFF successfully lobbied for Bloody Friday to be marked by Belfast City Council on the 50th Anniversary of the atrocity, bringing some well overdue recognition of the horror of that day to the families, injured and first responders connected

List of those murdered:

Stephen Cooper (19), member of the British Army, killed in explosion at Oxford Street Bus Station, Belfast

William Crothers (15), Protestant civilian, killed in explosion at Oxford Street Bus Station, Belfast

John Gibson (45), Protestant civilian, killed in explosion at Oxford Street Bus Station, Belfast

William Irvine (18), Protestant civilian (but also a UDA member) killed in explosion at Oxford Street Bus Station, Belfast

Thomas Killops (39), Protestant civilian, killed in explosion at Oxford Street Bus Station, Belfast

Brigid Murray (65), Roman Catholic civilian, killed in explosion in Cavehill Road, Belfast

Margaret O'Hare (34), Roman Catholic civilian, killed in explosion in Cavehill Road, Belfast

Stephen Parker (14), Protestant civilian, killed in explosion in Cavehill Road, Belfast

Philip Price (27), member of the British Army, killed in explosion at Oxford Street Bus Station, Belfast

RESERVE CONSTABLE JOHN MONTGOMERY (JACKIE) GIBSON

SERVICE NUMBER: R1974

23RD JULY 1927 – 21ST JULY 1972

Robert John Montgomery Gibson (known as Jackie) was born at Derryboy, Co. Down. He was married to Moreen Gibson and they had five children, Robert, Hilary, Lynda, Stephen and Dorothy. He was a bus driver with Ulsterbus and a part time Police Reserve Constable.

Along with his wife and two daughters he was a member of Raffrey Presbyterian Church choir, often taking the solo lead, he had previously been a member of Crossgar Choral Society, and proudly sang with the Belfast CE Choir. He was extremely well known in the local area and was very highly thought of.

Jackie was also keen gardener and his family have fond memories of him growing flowers and vegetables in his garden in particular they remember sweet pea, broad beans and peas.

Jackie was paying in the money to the office from his bus route on the 21st July 1972 when he was murdered by a Provisional IRA bomb which exploded in the Oxford Street Bus Station in Belfast, on the day which has become known as 'Bloody Friday'.

Over 50 years later he is still much loved and missed by his family. The patch on the quilt is memorialised by an Ulsterbus, a gardening image and musical notes to show his work and his love of gardening and singing.

THOMAS (TOM) KILLOPS

CIVILIAN

21ST JULY 1972

Thomas who was fondly known as Tom was born and bred in Portadown, County Armagh. He met a girl from Carryduff and they settled together in Newtownbreda.

Tom was a very talented artist and had a spare bedroom in his house which he used as his studio. His wife moved to England 13 years after his murder and only then was his art equipment removed from the room. Tom painted numerous memorial images on the banners carried by Orange Lodges.

Tom was an Ulsterbus driver but due to high blood pressure he had been confined to office duties, it was while he was at work that he was murdered during the 'Bloody Friday' attacks when a Provisional IRA bomb exploded in Oxford Street Bus Station in Belfast City Centre, he was 39 years old.

MARGARET O'HARE

CIVILIAN

SEPTEMBER 1937 – 21ST JULY 1972

Margaret was born and bred in Belfast, she was 34 years old and married with 7 children the youngest being only 1 year old at the time of Margaret's murder on 'Bloody Friday' - 21st January 1972.

Margaret had went to pick up some of her older children and was sitting in her car outside shops on the Cavehill Road when the bomb went off. She had 3 children with her at the time, they escaped with minor scrapes but unfortunately their beloved mother had her life stolen from her.

Having 7 children meant that Margaret was a very busy mother but she did enjoy some pass times such as dancing and drama.

The bombings perpetrated by The Provisional IRA that fateful deed had far-reaching implications for the O'Hare family and so many others impacted by the heinous events of that day.

STEPHEN PARKER

CIVILIAN

21ST JULY 1972

Stephen Parker was 14-years-old when he died in an explosion close to shops on the Cavehill Road in north Belfast, along with Margaret O'Hare, 34 and Brigid Murray, 65.

Stephen was one of nine to be murdered as a consequence of Bloody Friday, circa 130 were injured. Bloody Friday was an event and day which saw 22 bombs detonated across the city of Belfast by Provisional IRA terrorists, wreaking havoc.

His father, Rev Joseph Parker, the then chaplain to the Missions for Seamen in Belfast, had to identify Stephen following the explosion. Stephen's brother Roger also joined the clergy and ministers to his flock in England.

Stephen is remembered as "a young man full of life, full of fun," and his family have remarked that he had packed so much into 14 years as is often the case with those who die young, there was just such a life there.

Stephen was involved with The City of Belfast Youth Orchestra, and the prestigious Stephen Parker Award was established in his name. Stephen had so much to give and tragically this ended before he could ever reach his fullest potential.

DAVID MCALEESE

CIVILIAN

20TH DECEMBER 1972

David McAleese was a 37-year-old Roman Catholic civilian, he was married with 4 children and was an aircraft worker from Vulcan Street in the Short Strand.

Around 7am on 20th December 1972 he was standing on the Newtownards Road waiting for a lift to work as he did every other morning. He worked in the Royal Naval Aircraft yard and waited in the same place every day for his lift where he was shot by the UDA/UFF from a passing car. He was shot 3 times at close range. He just said goodbye to his wife and children and walked out of Young's Row when he was shot.

A passer-by comforted him until the ambulance arrived but he died shortly after being admitted to hospital.

David was described by his brother-in-law as a quiet family man who was not connected with any political body. He said: "David was a hard worker. There could be no real motive for this murder but whoever did it knew who they were hitting. He strolled down Vulcan Street every morning and it must have been easy to wait for him".

In January 1973, four men were charged for David's sectarian motivated murder.

JAMES MULLAN

CIVILIAN

21ST DECEMBER 1972

James was murdered by loyalists (believed to be the Red Hand Commando) as he waited on the Clondeboyne Road, Bangor for a lift to his nightshift work at a carpet factory based in Donaghadee. James lived in the nearby Tudor Park having moved from Belfast some months previously. He had formerly worked as a bread server. James had a 4-year-old son at the time of his murder.

As his regular lift pulled up so too did another car and shots were fired hitting James on the arm and stomach, he died in hospital just 30 minutes later. James' murder was the first sectarian killing to take place in Bangor, known as a picturesque North Down seaside Town.

In January 1973 four men from east Belfast were charged with his murder along with two others, Sandra Meli and David McAleese but three months later the charges were dropped. James Mullan is yet another murder which remains unsolved.

Unfortunately we have been unable to include a photograph for James within the booklet; James had been survived by sister Una whose married name was Moffett.

Una and her family joined SEFF some years ago after reading an article we had been quoted from within The Belfast Telegraph, she rang the office and asked could her family join, that ours' was the organisation that she could associate with – she related with our consistent stance on terrorism and criminal violence from whatever quarter it came.

Una was due to speak at SEFF's Conference in 2018 and the European Day for Victims of Terrorism event in Stormont but tragically she passed away in January of that year.

It was Una's wish prior to her passing that a patch be added on our next quilt remembering James so we are following through with her wishes.

Unfortunately despite several attempts we haven't been able to locate another surviving family member at the point of this Publication being printed.

Una and her husband owned the popular and successful business Balmoral Furniture and were no strangers to being victimised through terrorism, their business – a business which always employed Protestant and Roman Catholic was the business attacked by Bobby Sands and his colleagues and for which they were then incarcerated within the Maze Prison.

James will not be forgotten nor will Una, a lady we are privileged to have known.

SEAMUS GILMORE

CIVILIAN

21ST JUNE 1954 – 5TH FEBRUARY 1973

Seamus grew up in Rosscooile Park, North Belfast, he had 4 sisters and 1 brother. At 12 years of age Seamus bought himself a black and white Collie dog, he called it Sailor – he loved the dog and the dog loved him.

He attended Christian Brothers school and worked part time in a local petrol station at Mount Pleasant from the age of 14 years old. It was while he was working in the petrol station he was gunned down by members of the UVF in February 1973, he was 18 at the time.

Seamus also drove a dark blue mini which is represented within his patch on the Memorial Quilt.

The families of Senator Paddy Wilson and Seamus Gilmore are particularly close down the years, and remain so. They are able to empathise with each other's painful lived experiences.

COLERAINE BOMBINGS

12TH JUNE 1973

On 12 June 1973 the Provisional IRA detonated two car bombs in Coleraine, County Londonderry, Northern Ireland. The first bomb exploded at 3:00 pm on Railway Road, killing six people and injuring 33; several lost limbs and were left disabled for life. A second bomb exploded five minutes later at Hanover Place. This did not cause any injuries, although it added to the panic and confusion in the area. The IRA had sent a warning for the second bomb but said it had mistakenly given the wrong location for the first.

As the six victims had all been Protestant, the bombings brought about a violent backlash from loyalist paramilitaries, who swiftly retaliated by unleashing a series of sectarian killings of Catholics that culminated in the double killing of Senator Paddy Wilson and Irene Andrews on 25th/26th June.

Sinn Féin councillor Sean McGlinchey, brother of Dominic McGlinchey, later INLA Chief of Staff, was convicted of planting the bomb and spent 18 years in prison. He was elected mayor of Limavady Borough Council in 2011.

Two cars were stolen from south Londonderry and were packed with explosives and driven by an Active Service Unit (ASU) of the South Derry Provisional IRA to the mainly-Protestant town of Coleraine.

The car bombs were parked on Railway Road and Hanover Place. Two warnings made to the Telephone Exchange at 2.30pm. named the location for the Hanover Place device and for another bomb on Society Street, which later “proved to be a hoax”.

At about 3.00pm. a Ford Cortina containing a 100-150 pound (45-68 kg) bomb exploded outside a wine shop on Railway Road, killing six pensioners (four women and two men) and injuring 33 people, a number of them schoolchildren.

The six pensioners - Elizabeth Craigmile (76), Robert Scott (72), Dinah Campbell (72), Francis Campbell (70), Nan Davis (60), and Elizabeth Palmer (60) - were all Protestant.

Elizabeth Craigmile, the Campbells and their daughter Hilary had been on a day outing and were returning home to Belfast when the bomb had gone off; they were beside the carbomb at the moment of detonation.

In his book Years of Darkness: The Troubles Remembered, academic Gordon Gillespie described the attacks as “a forgotten massacre” of the Troubles”.

NAN DAVIS

CIVILIAN

27TH MARCH 1905 – 12TH JUNE 1973

Nan Davis was a 60-year-old widow from Linden Avenue, Coleraine, she had 4 children, 2 boys and 2 girls.

Nan was a home maker and enjoyed many pastimes including knitting, sewing, cooking and baking. She was also heavily involved in her church – St. Patrick's Church, Coleraine.

The church organised a lot of cross community events whether they be whist drives taking place in either the church or chapel hall. Nan would regularly attend these events and enjoyed them.

Nan's husband had only passed away a year before she was cruelly taken on 12th June 1973, she was murdered as the result of a Provisional IRA terrorist bomb which exploded on Railway Road in Coleraine. The bomb had been planted in a stolen car and exploded at 3pm murdering 6 people in total, 4 women and 2 men.

ELIZABETH (CISSIE) PALMER

CIVILIAN

1ST MARCH 1912 – 12TH JUNE 1973

Elizabeth was a 60-year-old, single lady, she had 2 brothers and 1 sister. Her family owned a home baking business and Elizabeth worked in one of the shops. She left there and moved to Belfast to work as a cook in a home for the blind. She loved her job but the 'Troubles' in Belfast meant that bombs in the City were on the increase and Elizabeth was frightened about this so she moved back to Portrush to live with her sister, she then got a flat of her own in Coleraine and started to work in an Off Licence in the town.

On 12th June 1973 she went to work a shift in the off-licence, she wasn't meant to be working but the owner and his son were going away and she was called in. Elizabeth's nephew was also meant to be working but he had an exam on the same day. Unfortunately at 3pm a Provisional IRA bomb went off on Railway Street, Coleraine murdering 6 people and injuring 33. A second bomb went off 5 minutes later at Hanover Place, it did not cause any fatalities or injuries but it caused further pandemonium.

Elizabeth was lovingly known as Cissie by her family, she was very fond of her nephews and nieces whom she lived with previously, if they were happy she was happy. On a number of occasions she took some of her nieces on a trip to Butlin's in the Summer holidays.

She always liked to help people, if she could help she would. She also enjoyed dancing and was a fan of Jim Reeves. She was a community spirit and as she was a fantastic baker she would often bake for events that were on in the local area.

SENATOR PADDY WILSON

CIVILIAN

1934 – 25TH JUNE 1973

Paddy Wilson was murdered by the UFF alongside Irene Andrews on 25th/26th June 1973. Paddy was married with one son.

Paddy was an SDLP Senator and was highly respected across the political divide. He was a founder member and former General Secretary of the Party. Paddy was a close colleague of former SDLP leader, Gerry Fitt.

Paddy was a native of the Sailortown area of Belfast, situated close by the docks and he was the youngest of seven children.

Years after his father was murdered, Paddy's son Paul was asked to contribute to a commemoration plaque to be unveiled in Parliament Buildings, Stormont remembering Senator Wilson but also Senator Jack Barnhill.

Paul came up with the following words which he believes best reflect the values system his Dad didn't just speak, but also which he lived out; equality, tolerance and respect.

The double murder of Paddy Wilson and Irene Andrews was amongst the most gruesome and frenzied act of sectarian motivated violence of the entire 'Troubles' period.

Paddy had a number of interests outside his family and work they included fishing, golf and cycling.

Irene was regarded as a capable clerk within the Department of Education and was also noted in Belfast as a popular ballroom dancer who had been a member of Northern Ireland's "Come Dancing" team.

In the frenzied knife attack committed upon Irene and Paddy, Irene endured 20 knife wounds, including having her breasts removed.

Irene was a much-loved daughter and had so much potential ahead of her, her murder and that of Paddy was carried out by those claiming to be 'loyalists'.

THOMAS NIEDERMAYER

The psychological trauma of what happened and the long agonising wait for the truth had a devastating impact on the Niedermayer family.

His wife Ingeborg, daughters Gabi and Renate and Gabi's husband Robin would all die by their own hands. All were victims of what happened to Thomas.

The Provisional IRA could have fully destroyed the Niedermayer family, their heinous murder of Thomas had ripple effects which continue to reverberate to this day.

He worked hard and was ambitious to make change believing that education and integrity of service was vital. He obtained a double first and a gold medal in debating at Queen's University where he also lectured, but as a Catholic he would never have gained tenure. During the Second World War he suffered the death of his brother Tommy at the hands of the Japanese. He worked at the Bar and eventually became a QC in 1956 the same year he married Gabrielle Casey, the daughter of a family he had known all his life. He had two daughters and was a caring and supportive husband and father. His family and friends were his refuge and relief as were his annual visits to his beloved Cudaff.

In 1965 he was the youngest Judge to be sworn in and he was appalled by the outbreak of violence in 1969 and did everything he could to act without fear or favour on the basis of evidence. He was against internment as he felt it would only inflame the situation. He was a constitutional nationalist and abhorred violence. His life had been threatened by paramilitaries on both sides of the divide. He believed that having a fair system of justice was worth pursuing and if necessary, dying for.

LA MON MASSACRE

17TH FEBRUARY 1978

La Mon was one of the most heinous crimes against humanity carried out by Provisional IRA terrorists over the course of 'the Troubles.'

Twelve innocents perished when burnt to death in a savage and barbaric act of premeditated terror.

That evening in the La Mon Hotel, the two main adjoining function rooms, the Peacock Room and Gransha Room, were packed with people of all ages attending dinner dances.

Including the hotel guests and staff, there was a total of 450 people inside the building. The diners had just finished their first course when the bomb detonated, shattering the window outside of which it was attached and vaporising the canisters.

The explosion created an instantaneous and devastating fireball of blazing petrol, 40 feet high and 60 feet wide, which engulfed the Peacock Room.

Twelve people were murdered, having been virtually burnt alive, and some 30 others were injured, many critically. Some of the wounded lost limbs, but for the most part received severe burns. One badly burnt survivor described the inferno inside the restaurant as "like a scene from hell", whilst another who lost her daughter Elizabeth and son-in-law, Ian McCracken, said the blast was "like the sun had exploded in front of my eyes".

There was further pandemonium after the lights had gone out and choking black smoke filled the room. The survivors, with their hair and clothing on fire, rushed to escape the burning room. It took firemen almost two hours to put out the blaze.

Those murdered were all Protestant civilians. Half were young married couples. Most of the dead and injured were members of the Irish Collie Club and the Northern Ireland Junior Motor Cycle Club, holding their yearly dinner dances in the Peacock Room and Gransha Room, respectively. The former took the full force of the explosion and subsequent fire; many of those who died had been seated nearest the window where the bomb had gone off. Some of the injured were still receiving treatment over 20 years later.

The device was a small blast bomb attached to four large petrol canisters, each filled with a home-made napalm-like substance of petrol and sugar. This was designed to stick to whatever it hit, a combination which caused severe burn injuries.

Some of the bodies had shrunk so much in the intense heat, it was first believed that there were children among the victims. One doctor who saw the remains described them as being like “charred logs of wood”.

According to a published account by retired RUC Detective Superintendent Kevin Benedict Sheehy (who was formerly associated with Innocent Victims United) this type of device had already been used by the Provisional IRA in more than one hundred attacks on commercial buildings before the La Mon attack.

Those murdered were:

Thomas Neeson (41)
 Sarah Wilson Cooper (62)
 Sandra Morris (27)
 Ian McCracken (25)
 Elizabeth McCracken (25)
 Daniel Magill (37)

Carol Mills (26)

The Provisional IRA claimed that they tried to send a warning from a public telephone, but were unable to do so until nine minutes before the bomb detonated.

Because of his kindness, his compassion, his good humour, he was unique.

Now he lies in the cold earth, shot in the head by gunmen.

Oh stupid stupid country, shooting the flower of your manhood.

THIS INNOCENT MAN WITH NO BLOOD ON HIS HANDS IS DEAD.

What a terrible waste,

WILLIAM AND LETITIA YOUNGER

WILLIAM 1893 – 15TH AUGUST 1980

LETITIA 1923 – 15TH AUGUST 1980

William was an 87-year-old civilian who was widower with two children and a retired fitter. His daughter Letitia was a 50-year-old civilian, single and a civil servant. They were both from a Protestant community background.

The inquest into the double murder was told by police that there was no apparent motive for the killing. A neighbour said that around 2:00am he heard noises and went to investigate; He said: "I went to the letterbox and called her name. The door pushed open and I went upstairs. I heard this terrible heavy breathing from Miss Younger's room so I went in and found her with a pitchfork stuck to the back of her neck". She was taken to the Mater Hospital where she later died.

RESERVE CONSTABLE LINDSAY GARDINER MCDOUGALL

SERVICE NUMBER: R1977

24TH NOVEMBER 1944 – 14TH JANUARY 1981

Lindsay was a civil servant and a part-time member of the RUC Reserve based at Musgrave Street station in Belfast City Centre. He married young and when he died aged 36 he left his wife and three sons aged 17, 15 and 12 years.

Lindsay was patrolling Great Victoria Street in Belfast City Centre when he was shot in the back of the head by terrorists on 9th January 1981. He was taken to Belfast City Hospital and operated on by neurosurgeons from the Royal Victoria Hospital, then transferred to intensive care in RVH. Lindsay had a strong faith in Jesus Christ and throughout his time on life support he always had someone sitting by his side – either a family member or the Minister or Elders from his church.

Lindsay was always in a critical state and the family were left in no doubt that he was likely to die. After a few days in ICU the family were reminded that Lindsay carried a donor card and permission was given to use his organs for transplantation. He died 6 days after being shot. These precious days allowed time for his family and friends to say goodbye.

Lindsay was an Elder in Mountpottinger Presbyterian Church, the Church Treasurer and a Boys Brigade Officer in the Junior Section. He was a keen sportsman and was still playing both rugby and cricket until he died, despite the best advice of his wife and teasing from his sons that he was too old! His regular reserve shift was on Friday night until the early hours but this never stopped him from taking the Junior Section boys for football matches on Saturday mornings, often followed by playing rugby in the afternoon.

Lindsay was a happy, fun loving person, notoriously easy going and chilled – he once fell asleep in the dentist chair! He had a weakness for buying British cars (always rusty) much to the embarrassment of his sons for school drop offs. The worse example was a mini that cost £4 from a ‘friend’ in the cricket club. He loved the church and BB but he lived for his family and not a day goes by when his wife and 3 boys don’t miss him.

He then volunteered to drive it away and as he was getting into the lorry he put his hand on the seat and the lorry exploded. A mercury-tilt switch had been placed under the seat which detonated the bomb.

Gary has 2 sisters and 1 brother still living at the time of this book being printed. His mother is also alive and will celebrate her 90th birthday at the end of April (2023).

In early childhood and into adulthood Gary had a keen interest in horses, he was also very practical, good with his hands and in particular an excellent cabinet maker. He owned an Opal Manta GTE at the time of his murder.

EDGAR SAMUEL DAVID GRAHAM

CIVILIAN

24TH FEBRUARY 1954 - 7TH DECEMBER 1983

Edgar Samuel David Graham, MPA, BL was an Ulster Unionist Party (UUP) politician and senior Law Lecturer at Queens University, Belfast.

In mid-morning on 7th December 1983, while chatting to UUP party and Queen's colleague Dermot Nesbitt at the University Square side of the main campus library, he was shot in the head a number of times by a Provisional IRA gunman and died almost instantly. He was 29 years old. Two persons were later convicted of withholding evidence from the police, but no one was ever convicted for his murder.

He was perceived as a rising star of both legal studies and Unionism until he was murdered by the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

A graduate of the Queen's University of Belfast in 1976 and working on a Doctorate for the University of Oxford, Edgar Graham was called to the Bar of Northern Ireland. He became a member of the Queen's University Belfast law faculty (from 1979), lecturing in public law, and was a law faculty colleague of David Trimble. A former Chairman of the Ulster Young Unionist Council, Edgar was widely seen as a possible future leader of the UUP.

A member of the Ulster Unionist Party since joining the Ballymena branch at the age of 14 he progressed through the party. Contrary to some statements he was never a member of Vanguard. As Leader of the Young Unionists he revived that part of the Party and was quickly seen as representing a new enlightened brand of Unionism.

He continued this into the senior party. In 1982 he addressed the Conservative Party Conference on the subject of Northern Ireland and was singled out as a leader of the future.

This led to international invitations such as to Harvard Summer School for leading young lawyers.

Edgar Graham was elected a member of the 1982 Northern Ireland Assembly for South Belfast.

Former Provisional IRA member turned police informer Sean O'Callaghan in his book The Informer suggested that the Provisional IRA murdered him because he was regarded by a journalist as "potentially the most effective political opponent facing Sinn Féin that the Ulster Unionists had yet produced" and likely to become the party leader.

DETECTIVE CONSTABLE MICHAEL MALONE

SERVICE NUMBER: 010604

9TH SEPTEMBER 1951 – 26TH AUGUST 1987

Michael was married with 2 children John (then aged 5 years 8 months) & Sarah (then aged 3 years 1 month). He was a Detective Constable within the RUC Special Branch, he was studying for the Sergeant's exam in the months before his murder. Michael was attached to the Portal Unit. The officers covered both the Belfast City Airport (now The George Best City Airport) and the area at Belfast Docks, where the Liverpool Boat used to dock.

Michael's absolute main interest was the welfare of his family and children. He spent every waking moment, that he could, with them. Doing the requisite shifts meant he often had to miss his children's bedtime. His solution was to waken them, for a chat and another bedtime story, when he got back home from a late shift.

Michael had been an avid collector of all things to do with Bob Dylan since the late 60s - albums, books and articles in print and on film. He attended concerts when possible and enjoyed live concerts of other artists also. He just loved what would now be called live gigs.

He and 2 of his 3 brothers were football fans and often gathered together to watch matches of what was then called the Football League First Division Clubs - later to be called the FA Premier League.

Michael was a philanthropist, sometimes to the detriment of his own comfort. He gave a lot of money to various charities and quietly & anonymously did charitable acts in and around Belfast, with schools and suchlike. These things are illustrated in the patch on the Eastern Region Quilt.

On 26th August 1987 Michael had been on duty at the City Airport until 8.30pm and was due to join colleagues for the night sailing of the Liverpool Boat. He received a call from his Sergeant, telling him that there might be a problem with the sailing and asking him to join him and the other colleague at the Liverpool Bar - just across from the dock area. They had been watching The Rose of Tralee on the TV in the bar, when gunmen burst in and shot both Michael & his colleague. Their Sergeant had escaped to the Gents. The terrorists then went outside to reload under the street lights. They then returned and fired again as Michael & his colleague lay on the floor. They died at the scene. None of the three Police Officers were armed.

JAMES HENRY BABINGTON

CIVILIAN

17TH NOVEMBER 1936 – 4TH OCTOBER 1989

James Henry Babington was known to most people who knew him as Henry, he was born on 17th November 1936 and was a son of Colonel Marcus Hill Babington DSO of Coolkeragh, Londonderry. James was a Laboratory Supervisor for Richardson's Fertiliser's in Belfast, he married Maura (nee White) originally from Glasgow in 1957 and they had three children, Finuala, Marcus and Jacqueline, James was a professional man who lived for his family.

Henry was a genius at most things mechanical and electrical. He acquired his boat the 'Reiff' when his children were small and they enjoyed many family holidays and trips to Scotland to see the Western Isles aboard her.

On 4th October 1989 Henry was shot by Provisional IRA gunmen as he walked to work on the Cavehill Road near his home. Henry's wife who was a Domestic Assistant in Belfast City Hospital heard on the radio that a man had been shot dead but did not realise it was her husband until she was called to a Sister's office at 1.30pm.

The family never got over Henry's death, Finuala (James' eldest child) passed away on 16th March 2017, she was laid to rest ironically on the same day as the terrorist Martin McGuinness.

As mentioned Henry's favourite pass time was being out on his boat the MV 'Reiff', he loved the boat and spending time on it with his family. After his death the family decided to scuttle the boat as they simply felt they could no longer use it without him there and so in December 1989, two months after his murder they took the Reiff for one last trip to sea but sadly on this occasion she did not return. The family felt that if Henry could no longer sail her then neither would anybody else.

ROBERT BURNS

CIVILIAN

31ST JANUARY 1940 - 6TH NOVEMBER 1989

Robert was a 49-year-old civilian married with 4 children and a self-employed tiler from Derriaghy. He was a founding member of the Ulster Grand prix a friend of Joey's and crazy about motorbikes.

He is remembered by his family with his head under the bonnet of the car covered in oil and grease or tile adhesive.

His daughter Laura recalls, 'he always looked scruffy, but contented in his scruffiness. Totally unaware that he even was scruffy. Shaggy dark blond hair, with a glint of red, hanging just off the shoulders in little kinks. Looking like it hadn't been brushed in days. A hint of a few days' growth on his face, which had even more of a hint of his ginger genes.

A denim jacket, fleece lined to keep him warm, even though I thought he was made of steel because it was as if he never felt the cold. A woolen hat that made him look gnome like, especially when the wee ball bit on the end of his nose went bright red. His jeans caked in hardened tile adhesive, and anything else he'd wiped onto them. No wonder he wasn't allowed to sit on the good furniture.'

'He had his own chair in the house. A black leather Parker Knoll recliner chair. While it might have been initially because of him being banned from the 'normal' chairs, his became the best seat in the house. We would all wait on him moving to leave for work, or to go outside to work at the car and, we'd all try to jump onto his seat before anyone else managed to get it.'

Apart from cars and work his only other interest was motorbikes and Formula 1. Anything that had an engine, but the bikes became a big thing. When the tourist board pulled out of Northern Ireland that meant the motorbike events like the Ulster grand prix were in danger of being lost. So, a group of local men got together including Robert, they formed the Ulster Grand Prix committee group and began to sell programmes and badges each year to fund the sport.

On 6th November 1989 Robert was speaking on the telephone in the hallway. As he was speaking, a hijacked taxi pulled up outside his home. Two men then got out of the car and saw Robert through the clear glass and shot him 5 times. Nurses who lived nearby tried to help him. The IPLO and the Catholic Reaction Force both claimed to be behind the attack. The IPLO had mistakenly said that Robert was a member of the security forces, he had just celebrated his silver wedding anniversary. Robert had been brought up a Protestant but converted to Catholicism. He is loved and missed every day by his family.

Leanne was one of nine people murdered in the Shankill bomb, an attack by Provisional IRA terrorists upon Frizzell's fish shop.

Leanne is remembered by her family as a lovely little girl who was very calm in life. She enjoyed her netball in school, coming home and as her brother Gary fondly recalls, arguing with him ... over little silly things about who would do the dishes for their mum or whose turn it was to do the housework.

Leanne was known as a very outgoing person who loved life. Her hair was very long and it took her hours to wash and brush it.

Leanne had been on a cross-community trip to America only six weeks before she died. On that trip she met another little girl called Roisin from Ligoniel who she became very friendly with. Roisin came down to the family home before the funeral.

Over the years Jackie had owned and raced dogs of his own; a couple of them had been very successful. The Greyhound Community was very mixed, they socialised and met with both sides of the community, there was never an issue. Although Jackie would never discuss the fact he was a serving member of the RUC, there is no doubt a lot of individuals within the Greyhound circles were aware.

Jackie was sitting in the bar area having a drink with Kim and friends; a Provisional IRA gunman walked up and shot Jackie in the head in front of his pregnant wife and then shot him again as he lay on the ground, a second gunman fired shots in the air before making their escape. Jackie was pronounced dead on arrival at the Mater Hospital.

DAVID CUPPLES

CIVILIAN

1987 – 25TH DECEMBER 2002

David Cupples was savagely attacked by a so-called loyalist on 22nd December 2002 and died of his injuries on Christmas Day. He is believed the sole victim of our 'Troubles' to die on Christmas Day forever changing the emphasis of that day for the Cupples family.

David 25-years-old, a civilian, single, and was a kitchen worker. He came from a Protestant community background.

David had recently moved into his own house in the Braniel estate in East Belfast. He had been working at the Girdwood army barracks for five years as a civilian worker.

His father dropped him off close to the Mater Hospital and he was walking to the barracks. They did not drive the car to the barracks for safety and security reasons.

Loyalists who attacked him had mistaken him for a Roman Catholic because he was walking toward the Cliftonville Road. David's life was cruelly cut short and alike all the other innocents who perished over the years of the violence, the key unanswered question on the hearts of the families impacted is, for what?

CIVILIAN

31ST MARCH 1990 – 18TH APRIL 2019

Lyra McKee was a Freelance Investigative Journalist, Editor of Online Magazine, Author and International 'Online Journalism' Speaker and Trainer. She was the main carer for her disabled mother Joan and was co-habiting with her partner at the time of her death.

Lyra was interested in social issues: LGBT+ Rights, Refugee Rights, Rights of the marginalised in general, Truth, Justice and Legacy of the Troubles. Lyra supported many social campaigns and always championed those without a voice. She attended weekly Krav Maga (self-defence/combat martial art) lessons and was an avid fastfood connoisseur. Lyra loved going to the cinema with her friends and she particularly enjoyed the Harry Potter and Marvel film series.

On 18th April 2019 Lyra was shot dead by dissident republicans (calling themselves the New IRA) in Creggan, Derry/Londonderry as she observed a riot.

Within her patch on the Memorial Quilt her family chose a Large heart as Lyra had the biggest heart in the world. Not only would she have done anything for the people she loved, Lyra was a person who was kind, empathetic and generous to people regardless of their personal background, history or affiliations. They also chose a magnifying glass as this image represents Lyra's chosen profession and first love: investigative journalism.
